

Dentures vs. Dental Implants

You're missing a lot or all of your teeth. You never feel like smiling. Eating is a chore and all your favorite foods seem out of reach. Fresh corn-on-the-cob, a nice juicy steak, a crunchy red apple – you feel as if you may never enjoy them again. Speaking is even difficult and embarrassing. The fun has just faded from life and you just wish you could hide.

Dentures are a time-tested way to replace missing teeth. On the other hand, they certainly have their drawbacks. If you're displeased with your dentures, or there are things about them that you'd like to change, you may want to consider ALL on 4 dental implants. ALL on 4 implants are a full arch of teeth that are held in place with as few as four posts (see graphic top right). They're a good choice for patients who need a total tooth replacement and patients with bone loss. Here are some reasons why denture wearers should consider all on four dental implants.

Get Your Bite Force Back

You probably noticed a major change in your diet and eating habits after getting dentures. Dentures make it challenging to chew your food thoroughly, and some hard or chewy foods are probably off the table entirely, because your dentures just can't handle them. Dentures don't allow you to bite with the full force of your natural teeth because unlike your teeth, they aren't rooted in your jaw bone. However, dental implants have a titanium post that takes the place of the tooth root. Because ALL on 4 implants are anchored to your jaw, you can bite with considerably more force than you can with dentures. This will help you expand your diet to include all of your favorite foods again.

Avoid Embarrassing Situations

Have you ever felt your dentures slide or shift positions in your mouth while you were smiling, talking to someone, or eating with a friend? Tooth loss isn't something to be embarrassed about, but it's hard not to feel embarrassment when your teeth are visibly moving around in your mouth. Again, the titanium posts that hold your dental implants in place will save the day. Smile with confidence, talk without covering your mouth, eat what you like without stopping to adjust your teeth. Your ALL on 4 dental implants will stay in place and free you from worry about whether your teeth are moving.

Get a Permanent Solution

How often you will need to replace or repair your dentures varies by patient, but it's a sure bet that you will have to repair or replace them eventually. It's easy to drop your slippery dentures while cleaning them, and they can shatter in your sink or on your tiled bathroom floor. Even if you manage to avoid this kind of damage, the dentures will wear with time and need to be relined or replaced. And what's more, without the stimulation that your jaw bone used to get from your tooth roots, your face will change shape, which will result in dentures that no longer fit properly and need to be adjusted. ALL on 4 dental implants don't need to be taken out and cleaned—you clean them just as you would natural teeth, which cuts down on the possibility of damage. And with good care, they should last the rest of your life. They also provide the missing stimulation to your jaw bone, which helps you preserve your bone mass and prevents your face from changing shape. Often, patients who already have dentures believe that they aren't candidates for dental implants, but ALL on 4 dental implants are appropriate for many patients with dentures.
